July 7-10, 2010
Kadir Has University
Istanbul, Turkey
CONFERENCE DETAILS
Welcome to the Ninth International Conference of the International Society for Third Sector Research (ISTR).

We would like to thank our hosts, Third Sector Foundation of Turkey (TUSEV) and Kadir Has University of Istanbul, Turkey.

TUSEV was founded in 1993 between Turkey’s leading foundations and associations, and today more than 100 trustees of the foundation work in cooperation with TUSEV. Their work includes support for NGOs to an improved legal and fiscal environment, providing strategic and effective resources to NGOs to ensure the support of cooperation amongst public, private, and third sector organizations, and support of civil society research projects involved in research activities and programs for the future of civil society.

Kadir Has University (KHU) was founded in 1997, in Istanbul. The university, with its six faculties of Engineering, Sciences and Humanities, Economics and Administrative Sciences, Communication, Law and Fine Arts, as well as its several vocational schools, is dedicated to becoming a leader in educational and cultural fields in Turkey, as well as establishing itself as an international center for research and scientific development.

IMPORTANT INFORMATION
Please wear your conference name badge! This will help contribute to increased interaction and spirit, and will assist in your getting acquainted with your fellow conference participants. New members of the Society are identified by a royal blue ribbon on their conference badge. Please welcome new members to the conference!

CONFERENCE VENUE
All sessions will be held at the Kadir Has University in Istanbul, Turkey. Conference check-in and Information will be in the Lobby during the entire conference. Sessions will be held throughout the building.

Registration and Check-In: Check-in will be held on Wednesday, July 7, beginning at 9:30am in the Lobby. Check-in on Thursday, July 8 and Friday, July 9 will begin at 8:30am. The Conference Registration fee includes all sessions and materials as well as the Wednesday and Friday evening receptions, and lunches on Thursday, Friday, and Saturday.

Notices regarding Affinity Group Meetings will be posted on the Message Board. Please sign up for any of these meetings which interest you. Affinity Groups will meet during lunch on Friday, July 8.

Messages: Messages may be posted on the Message Board in the Lobby.

EVENING RECEPTIONS
An opening reception will be held on Wednesday, July 7, at 8:30pm, following the opening session. The reception will be at Kadir Has University.

A Turkish Cultural Event will be held at the Military Museum on Friday evening, July 9, at 8:30 pm. The Museum (Askери Müzesi) is located at Harbiye, 1 km (just over a half mile) north of Taksim Square.

BOOK SIGNING
ISTR authors of recently published books will be available on Friday, July 9, from 4:00 - 5:00pm to sign and sell their books.

POSTER PRESENTATIONS
Posters offer an opportunity to display research about completed and/or ongoing projects. Posters will be displayed throughout the conference and a session is scheduled for Friday afternoon, July 9, from 4:00 - 5:00 pm, at which participants will have the opportunity to meet the authors and talk to them about their work.

INTERNET LAB (next to room 107)
An Internet Lab will be available at no charge for conference participants. Please note that there is a ten-minute limit if other delegates are waiting to use the computers.
Lab Hours:
Wednesday, Thursday & Friday:
9:00am - 6:00pm
Saturday:
9:00am - Noon

2010 CONFERENCE THEME:
FACING CRISSES: CHALLENGES AND OPPORTUNITIES CONFRONTING THE THIRD SECTOR AND CIVIL SOCIETY
Without question the role of civil society has expanded in many countries throughout the world over the past several decades. Whether in more open or more authoritarian environments, the third sector is playing an important role in providing social services, contributing to policy development, advocating for the rights of poor and oppressed people and for women’s rights, contributing to livelihoods and reduction of poverty when the state and market cannot or will not do so, making international aid more effective, growing social capital, contributing to social enterprise and social entrepreneurship, and in many other ways.

Yet there are also significant and growing challenges to the role of civil society as well – challenges posed by the economic and financial crisis that has spread across the world since early 2008, particularly for the poor and for women; ongoing global and local environmental crises; major wars, international and internal, and the related refugee crises; public health issues; global climate change; and many others. These new challenges exist alongside attempts to limit third sector organizations to largely charitable work and service delivery; tightening of legal and political controls on third sector organizations; physical threats to NGO workers, intellectuals, and others; cuts in funding and donations; viewing the third sector as an adjunct and conduit for terrorism and the resulting limitations on transnational philanthropy; the broader concerns for accountability and democracy in the third sector; and many other issues.

At the same time, opportunities exist in the climate of change in citizen participation around the world, innovative ideas for philanthropy, for volunteering and for giving, and what we know and what we are still far from understanding: the role of foundations, and grant-making, the role of governments and the fine line of citizen/government participation, the role of the market and corporations and what social responsibility means for all sides.

After two decades of unprecedented growth in and recognition of the third sector and civil society, the 2010 ISTR International Conference will take stock of the challenges and opportunities facing the third sector and civil society.
ISTR’s Ninth International Conference in Istanbul, Turkey offers an excellent opportunity for discussing these and related questions in an academic environment of theoretical and empirical rigor and creativity.

SPECIAL SESSIONS
At this conference the conference committee is pleased to announce the inclusion of five special sessions. They have been integrated into the conference program and are noted with 🎉. They include developmental sessions on research on transnational philanthropy and in the Middle East and North Africa regions and reflective sessions on publishing, PhD networks and archives. These sessions have been organized to stimulate research interest and agendas in thematic or geographic areas that have traditionally been under researched or offer new ideas and thinking to support members’ efforts to build infrastructure and processes for third sector research.
The sessions are outside the standard peer review process and the conference committee believes that they each bring significant value to the conference program.
ISTR would like to thank the following organizations for their generous support of the 9th International Conference of the International Society for third Sector Research (ISTR).

Arab Philanthropy: Trends and Challenges to Networking
Chair: Barbara Ibrahim, American University of Cairo

This is a dynamic period for philanthropic growth in the Arab region. The Arab Foundations Forum jointly with the John D. Gerhart Center for Philanthropy and Civic Engagement at the American University of Cairo (Gerhart Center), will be holding a session with the following key objectives: 1) to present key trends in Arab philanthropy; 2) to present the Arab Foundations Forum as the key network of foundations in the Arab region; and 3) to promote research on quantifying philanthropy in the Arab region.

Room 104

Standard Chart of Accounts
Chair: Myles McGregor-Lowndes, Director, Australian Centre for Philanthropy and Nonprofit Studies

Since 2002, The Australian Centre for Philanthropy at the Queensland University of Technology (QUT) has developed a Standard Chart of Accounts and data dictionary for nonprofit organisations. The project’s aim was to rationalise the acquittal requirements placed on nonprofit organisations by government funders. We found there to be little consistency between departments in the financial treatment and accounting terms used in grant and tender reporting. This created a heavy compliance burden on NPOs when acquitting grants. They often forced to go back to vouchers and manually recalculate the cost of financial transactions when reporting on expenditure in specific programs. The Standard Chart of Accounts has been developed through extensive consultations with stakeholders and will be adopted by all Australian government agencies in 2010 to standardise grant reporting.

Exploring Diverse Interpretations of Gender Issues:
Chair: Priya Anand and Latika Mangrulkar

This workshop will bring together a wide range of points of view on this complex and complicated social issue. Our goal is to brainstorm ideas, formulate possible hypotheses and plan and develop theoretical and practical approaches as they affect gender relations to help create more civil, pro-actively peace focused communities.

As we enter what is being called the Century of Women we have gone far beyond the adversarial phase yet gender dynamics still arouse strong feelings. We need to engage the other “gender,” this time the ‘male’ whose feelings of being threatened need to be viewed from a different, more collaborative angle. With these expectations in mind the Third Sector takes on an even more urgent and pivotal role in the area of Gender Issues.

Making up more than 50% of the constituencies’ the increasing prominence of women has resulted in...
“men being left behind,” even in educated and more enlightened societies, on emotional and psychological levels. It is in this area that we need to engage them and strive towards a more equitable ground.

Our objective is to engage as many attendees as possible and rather than have series of long and formal presentations we ask you to send in brief summaries of the work you are doing or ideas that you think are essential in this important discussion. Priya and Latika will act as facilitators at a round-table conversation where we can bring innovative as well as tried and true concepts to move the debate forward.

Room 102
Meeting the Challenges and Opportunities for the Third Sector in Turkey
Chair: Zeynep Meydanoglu, Programme Director, Third Sector Foundation of Turkey

This workshop will provide a closer look at the Turkish third sector by focusing on the work Turkish foundations and civil society organizations undertake. It will examine civil society organizations from a multitude of perspectives in an attempt to identify key challenges and opportunities they face in promoting social change and development in Turkey.

Room 107
Developing Strategy for Civil Society in the Black Sea Region: A Dialogue for Moving Forward
Chair: TBD

This workshop will focus on the state of civil society in the Black Sea Region. Using CIVICUS Civil Society index (CSI) findings as a conceptual framework, dialogue and collective learning on the character, impact, environment and aspirations of civil society will be achieved and a comprehensive and participatory ‘strategic action planning exercise’ will be undertaken. This exercise will achieve a shared understanding and dialogue on the state of civil society in the Black Sea Region among a broad range of stakeholders including researchers, academicians and civil society stakeholders.

Room 207
The Future of Peer Review: Theory and Best Practices with a Focus on Foundation Policies
Chair: Giuliana Gemelli, PHaSi Research Center University of Bologna

Peer review is commonly accepted as an essential part of scientific publication. But the ways peer review is put into practice vary across journals, disciplines and contexts. What is the best method of peer review? Is it a truly value-adding process? What are the ethical concerns? How can new technology be used to improve traditional models? This workshop will analyze these questions, but also explore the issues of peer-review in a very specific context: foundation policies and the role of peer review in the grant making process with a particular focus on biomedical research.

Presenters include Giovanni Romeo, President of the European Genetics Foundation and Professor of Medical Genetics, University of Bologna; William B. Schneider and Suzanne Lupton, Indiana University Center on Philanthropy- Indiana University Purdue University Indianapolis; and Omer Cebeci, The Scientific and Technological Research Council of Turkey.

Room 208
Italian Patterns of Giving in a European Perspective:
Chair: Giuliana Gemelli, PHaSi Research Center University of Bologna

The main issue of the workshop is to connect the dots between the production of “reflexive” data base and a qualitative analysis of the evolutionary patterns of philanthropic organizations in Italy. Models of governance, leadership, human resources and intellectual capital will be the focus. Participants will be asked to situate their data base production and their qualitative analysis in the framework of comparative analysis within the European context. The aim is to develop a research-action to mobilize the various actors towards strengthening transparency policies as well as creative patterns of relations between the different sectors of civil society and philanthropic organizations.

Discussants will include: Marco Demarie (Compagnia di San Paolo), E. Bodo (Sodalitas), F. Vannini (In-

Partnership, Participation and Paradox

Chair: Deena White, Université de Montréal

This workshop seeks to bring together researchers with an interest in theoretical development regarding government – third sector relations. It is organized in conjunction with the Istanbul panels Between Democracy and Governance: Participation, Partnership and Paradox; Panel I and Policy and Politics: Representation and Contestation; Panel II.

The workshop will provide an opportunity to discuss new approaches to changing government – third sector relations. The intent is to bring together researchers who are moving beyond theories of collaboration on the one hand (governance networks, partnerships, co-production) or, on the other hand, theories of conflict (incorporation, instrumentalisation, cooption, etc.) in order to better understand the dynamics of how opposing processes combine to produce contradictions and bring about change.

We are interested in building on approaches that take seriously contingency, agency and politics. While institutional arrangements are also to be taken seriously, we want to learn how third sector agency can come to influence those arrangements.

Beyond stimulating discussion, the purpose of the workshop is to explore the possibility and logistics of producing a collective, comparative work on the subject, based on current or past research. Any delegates who feel they have a contribution to make are invited to attend and share their ideas.

Room 202

Understanding Volunteerism for Development in South-Eastern Europe and the Commonwealth of Independent States: Strategies for Expansion

Convenor: Mr. Steve Powell, Director of proMENTE Social Research

This workshop will focus on the state of volunteerism in South-Eastern Europe and Commonwealth of Independent States region (Region). Using the findings of the research the workshop with explore how volunteerism can make a positive impact in the countries in the Region and support progress towards achieving higher levels of human development, as defined through the MDG framework. The research is based on the reanalysis of the World Values Survey data and focus groups, conducted in selected countries in the Region.
The objective of this panel is to provide an overview of the status of research on Civil Society Organizations (CSOs) in the broader Middle East and North Africa Region (BMENA), with the dual aim of highlighting the gaps in research, and exploring the impact that research has or could have on policy-making in the region and on the effectiveness of CSOs.

The panel will begin with a joint presentation by Lena El-Malak, Research Coordinator at the Foundation for the Future (FFF) and Haider Saeed, Visiting Research Advisor at the Foundation. Dr. El-Malak will begin by discussing the Foundation’s role and its contribution to the empowerment of CSOs in the region, while Dr. Saeed will be providing an overview of the status of research on CSOs in the BMENA region.

Their joint presentation will be followed by a presentation by Rami Khouri, director of the Issam Fares Institute for Public Policy Research. Mr. Khouri will draw on his vast experience in policy-making to explore ways to bridge research and policy in order to effect political and social change. The session will end with a presentation by Osama Kadi, co-founder and president of the Washington-based Syrian Center for Political and Strategic Studies. Dr. Kadi’s paper will outline ways in which research can be used as a tool to improve the effectiveness of community based organizations, with a particular emphasis on CSOs based in the BMENA region.

The objective of this session at the ISTR conference is to discuss the needs of PhD students and ways to organize support, through meetings and other means. Both PhD students and senior researchers are invited to reflect upon this issue. In our field, PhD networks have become increasingly important as a platform for strengthening the research community. Many doctoral students have little or no systematic training in third sector theories and approaches, and often find themselves isolated from current developments in the field. Moreover, because of their intellectual isolation from the larger field and from each other, PhD candidates may fail to benefit from the opportunities and intellectual enrichment a network of contacts among fellow scholars and students could provide. To overcome these problems, several PhD network meetings have been organised in Europe over the past decade. At the meetings students are introduced to theories and approaches in the field; discuss current and future research topics; present their own work to a group of peers; and allow them to benefit from the feedback of fellow students and the advice of a broad group of senior researchers.

Archives as Tools of Understanding

Organized by International Philanthropy at the Rockefeller Archive Center

Kenneth W. Rose, Rockefeller Archive Center, USA

Kivanc Kilinc, SUNY Binghamton, USA

This panel focuses on the value of archives for understanding the process of philanthropy and for assessing its role in an increasingly intertwined world. More than dusty remnants of a bygone era, archives provide the context for understanding current issues and enable practitioners struggling with modern-day problems to connect with their predecessors as they grappled with the dilemmas of their day. Ken Rose, Associate Director of Research and Education at the Rockefeller Archive Center (RAC), will draw upon more than twenty years of experience to describe the RAC’s collections and the various international philanthropic subjects they illuminate, from wartime and disaster relief to economic and agricultural development, and from developing leadership to creating new nonprofit organizations to meet particular needs. The core of the RAC’s holdings are the personal papers of three generations of the Rockefeller family as well as the records of foundations they have established, from the International Education Board and the Rockefeller Foundation to the Rockefeller Brothers Fund and the Population Council. The Center’s collections also include the records of other, non-Rockefeller foundations and nonprofits, such as the Near East Foundation. Dr. Rose will describe the typical grant file and the nature of the correspondence and reports found in the archives, as well as some of the larger themes that they address. To better illustrate the value of archives, Kivanc Kilinc, a doctoral candidate at the State University on New York at Binghamton, will discuss the Rockefeller Foundation’s work in Turkey after the creation of the republic in 1923. As in most countries, the foundation began work in Turkey on public health issues, and its work expanded from that base. Thus, this panel will provide a general overview of the value of archives as well as a specific example of how archival research helps to understand and assess philanthropy in a particular setting.

How Can Transnational Philanthropy Impact Social Development: Experiences of Donors

Organized by Turkish Philanthropy Funds (TPF)

Banu Onaral: School of Biomedical Engineering, Science and Health Systems, Drexel University, H.H. Sun Professor and Director
Haldun Tashman: Chairman, Turkish Philanthropy Funds
Senay Ataselim- Yilmaz: COO, Turkish Philanthropy Funds

This session explores whether transnational giving -- by individuals and groups -- can help to reduce inequality, poverty and injustice, and strengthen social development? Key leaders in transnational philanthropy towards Turkey will discuss these urgent questions in this special session. Among the issues they will address are: How can transnational philanthropy be effective in providing not only financial capital but also human and social capital? How can transnational giving facilitate equitable development through ties to domestic power structures -- or does it perpetuate unequal development? Are there creative and innovative models for transnational giving?

NGO Research Center at Tsinghua University

The NGO Research Center (NGORC) was founded by Professor Wang Ming on October 14th, 1998, as one of five permanent institutes within Tsinghua University’s School of Public Policy & Management. NGORC is committed to conducting theoretical and empirical research on nonprofit organizations in China as well as educating senior public managers whose work involves NGOs, members of public service institutions and related political bodies. Its overall aim is to advance the construction of laws and management systems related to NGOs and to drive the realization and development of civil society in China.

Under NGORC are two additional organizations: the Clean Development Mechanism R&D Center (CDM R&D Center) and the editorial office for a journal, the China Nonprofit Review.

CDM R&D Center

Founded on Oct. 11th of 2005, the CDM R&D Center works in cooperation with Chinese and international NGOs in the fields of climate change and environmental governance, with government authorities, and with enterprises. It focuses on theoretical, applied and public policy research on climate change and environmental governance. Its research areas include the role of NGOs in climate change and environmental governance; national policies and strategies addressing climate change; and clean development mechanisms and voluntary carbon markets (VCM).

The China Nonprofit Review

The China Nonprofit Review is a specialized journal on NGO studies that began publication in December, 2007. The Review is published in Chinese by the Social Sciences Academic Press every June and December; the English version is published overseas by Brill Academic Publishers every February and August.

The Review contains four types of entries: original articles, case studies, book reviews and informal essays. Newly-published articles present original research results related to NGOs. Case studies offer descriptions of NGOs in practice as well as case analyses. Book reviews introduce and review significant books on NGOs. “Informal essays” may contain experts’ reflections on NGO research, conference comments, or personal accounts.

Although civil society is definitely not a panacea for all challenges of the modern state, the chapters of the anthology show that national paths and patterns of civil society and third sector developments can be used as important benchmarks and examples of best — and sometimes worst — practices for the successful development of governance. By analysing theoretical and empirical evidence from local, national and international contexts, the authors contribute to a transfer of knowledge between the national discourses and practices of civil society and illustrate what civil society can achieve and what it cannot.

The market, the state and third sector have all been hailed as central agents in civilizing modern societies, but with shaky evidence. This book examines how civil behaviour can be identified in any institutional setting. Crossing traditional spheres and disciplines, it explores the concept of “civicness” to search for the source of our modern civil society.

How third sector organizations cope with changing environments is investigated in five European countries focusing on the policy fields of sports, culture and social services. There is a strong trend towards polarization within the third sector: small and powerless grassroots organizations on the one hand, and powerful business-like organizations on the other hand.

CREATING SOCIAL IMPACT

The Centre for Social Impact (CSI) is a unique partnership between the Business Schools of the University of New South Wales, the University of Melbourne, Swinburne University of Technology and the University of Western Australia.

Our mission is to create beneficial social impact in Australia through teaching, research, measurement and the promotion of public debate. We bring academia, business, government, and third sectors together in a collaborative effort to build community capacity, support efficient and effective third sector organisations, facilitate social investment, and generate and diffuse social innovation.

CSI is an active member of ISTR. We are affiliated with seven international organisations and hosted thirteen international visitors in 2009. We seek world-class global alliances with universities, researchers, teachers, third sector organisations, and social entrepreneurs and are looking to expand our research, teaching and engagement programs through international collaborations.
